

Sifting Through Archive Workshops call out

We invite you to join us for a three-part-workshop series about precarious housing histories in January, February and March 2025. Register your interest today.

About This Event

This project is the first part of research into a speculative exhibition exploring shared homes with strangers as a means of survival in our current economic climate. A particular focus is the consequent phenomena of blended/contested cultures within houseshares and questions around what it means to have 'a room to your name'.

A series of three free workshops at Museum of the Home will be taking place in January, February and March 2025. Each session will involve collective research and knowledge exchange around the archives, followed by a shared dinner amongst all of our participants. To register your interest, please visit:
